

Wetlands for Water: The East Fork Wetland Project

John DeFillipo, Director, John Bunker Sands Wetland Center

The East Fork Wetland, located in Seagoville, TX, includes approximately 1,840 acres of wetland habitat and is one of the largest constructed wetlands in the United States. Please join John DeFillipo, an experienced environmental educator and naturalist, in learning about this exciting project.

L O C A T I O N

Lake Waco Wetlands
1752 Eichelberger Crossing Road

D A T E

Thursday February 16, 2012

T I M E

7-8 pm

2012 H.O.T. H2O Lecture Series, hosted by Heart of Texas Master Naturalists

All lectures are at 7 pm at the Lake Waco Wetlands and are free and open to the public:

April 19th - "Fishes of central Texas streams: diversity, distribution, and their responses to drought and pollution" Dr. Ryan King, Baylor University

May 17th - Video Screening of "The State of the Gulf: America's Sea", part of a new Texas Parks and Wildlife Department program with discussion led by a H.O.T. Master Naturalist

June 21st - "Pharmaceuticals and other Environmental Contaminants of Emerging Concern: Lessons Learned from Fish on Prozac" Dr. Bryan Brooks, Baylor University

Oct 18th - "Northern Invasion of Tropical Algae: Lake Waco and beyond" Dr. Owen Lind, Baylor University

F O R M O R E I N F O R M A T I O N

Nora Schell, Lake Waco Wetlands
(254) 848-9654

